Dean Michelle S. Simon announced the renaming of Pace Law School’s 1L Moot Court Competition. It will now be known as The Louis V. Fasulo First Year Moot Court Competition in recognition of Professor Fasulo’s many contributions to the school’s moot court and trial advocacy teams.

As the Director of Advocacy Programs, Professor Fasulo, and a dedicated team of instructors, help Pace students sharpen their writing and advocacy skills and prepare for competitions. Professor Fasulo organizes, supervises, and participates in the selection of members for Pace Law’s moot court and trial advocacy teams and helps support the coaches as they prepare the teams to represent Pace. His Advanced Appellate Advocacy course has become a training ground for any student who wishes to become a trial lawyer.

“Lou’s boundless passion and enthusiasm infects everyone around him—faculty, staff, and students,” said Dean Simon when announcing the award.
