Madeline Fletcher, Esq.

Madeline Fletcher is the Director of the Newburgh Community Land Bank, Inc. Prior to joining the Land Bank, Madeline was the director of another local community development corporation in Newburgh where she helped started several community gardens and undertook a green land use planning process with the help of Hudson River Valley Greenway funding and a USDA sponsored Community Food Plan. At the Land Bank, Madeline has prioritized acquiring and preserving vacant sites for the purposes of community gardening and urban agriculture. Ms. Fletcher practiced as a land use attorney and planner in New York City before working in Newburgh. She has published work on New York Land Banking and has presented at numerous conferences on community gardening and land banking. Ms. Fletcher holds degrees from Cornell University, Hunter College and Brooklyn Law School.
