Students

Olivia Brenner (JD expected '21) recently found out her article "The Harm of Death: The Conceptualizations of Harm in End of Life Issues" was accepted for publication in the Westchester Bar Journal.

Alumni

Professor Bridget Crawford hosted her annual Tax Alumni Come (Back) to the Classroom event on Monday, November 2. This year, the event was held via Zoom. Six alumni participants joined Professor Crawford's Federal Tax class and participated in a roundtable discussion, a Q&A with the student audience, gave concluding remarks, and even had breakout rooms where students were free to join any room they wished and move from room to room to interact further with the alumni. Students prepared for the class with a series of specific readings. As noted by Professor Crawford: "[t]he goals of the Tax Alumni Come Back to the Classroom Day are simple: showcase some of our alumni doing exciting professional work; encourage students to think about how a solid grounding in tax law and policy can be useful in any career; inspire students to connect some of what we learn in class to real issues that attorneys face every day; encourage students to think about careers in taxation in particular; connect alumni to each other." This is the fourth year that Professor Crawford has hosted the event. Alumni participants for this year's event included: Shamik Trivedi '08, special counsel with the IRS Office of Chief Counsel (Large Business & International) where he advises the IRS on domestic tax matters, Michelle McCalla '07, Director of Tax Accounting for WeWork, a leading global flexible shared space provider, Michael Franchi '05, Portfolio Manager at UBS Asset Management in New York, Boris Sharapan Fabrikant '08, Compass Real Estate, Christiane Desrosiers '18, Tax Associate at PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP (PwC), and Stephanie Nachtrieb '09, Manager in Mergers & Acquisitions, Tax for KPMG LLP.

Recently, students in Haub Law's Dannat Hall residence hall were quarantined due to positive COVID-19 cases. The Alumni Board, led by president of the Board, Mark Meeker, responded to an outreach by Student Services to connect with the students. Read more.
