Alan Mallach, FAICP

Alan Mallach is a senior fellow at the Center for Community Progress, a non-resident senior fellow at the Metropolitan Policy Program of The Brookings Institution in Washington DC and a visiting scholar at the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia. He has been engaged in urban policy, city planning and community development as a public and private sector practitioner, advocate and scholar for over forty years. He has taught at Rutgers University and the New Jersey Institute of Technology, served as a Brookings Scholar at the University of Nevada Las Vegas for the 2010-2011 academic year, and is currently teaching at Pratt Institute in New York City. Among his books are A Decent Home: Planning, Building and Preserving Affordable Housing (2009) from Planners Press and Bringing Buildings Back: From Vacant Properties to Community Assets (2006, Second Edition 2010). He is a member of the College of Fellows of the American Institute of Certified Planners, and received his B.A. degree from Yale University.