

Bomee Jung

Cadence OneFive, Inc.

Bomee Jung is co-founder and CEO of Cadence OneFive Inc., a public benefit corporation with a climate justice mission developing market-transforming software to enable city-scale acceleration of existing building decarbonization.

Bomee has contributed to New York City's climate leadership through policy and programmatic innovations since 2002. As the inaugural VP for Energy and Sustainability at the New York City Housing Authority (NYCHA), she developed public housing's most ambitious 10-year strategic sustainability plan, secured the commitment to decarbonization through beneficial electrification, initiated portfolio-wide climate adaptation planning, grew the energy and sustainability construction program from $18 million to a $1+ billion pipeline, and launched a large-scale community solar program with the goal of siting 25 megawatts.

Prior to NYCHA, Bomee designed and led the climate mitigation and adaptation programs of the New York office of Enterprise Community Partners, Inc., including securing New York City's adoption of the Enterprise Green Communities Criteria as its green standard for affordable housing, and designing Enterprise's post-Sandy resiliency initiative to build climate adaptation capacity of multifamily affordable housing owners. In 2003, Bomee co-founded GreenHomeNYC, Inc., a volunteer-driven nonprofit that brings professional green-building knowledge to lay audiences while supporting new entrants to green careers. In her first career, she developed Internet-based applications for digital agencies and start-ups.

Bomee holds a Master in City Planning degree from MIT and a Bachelor's degree in Comparative Literature and Japanese from the University of Georgia. She serves on the board of the Institute for Market Transformation (imt.org) and the loan committee of Capital For Change (capitalforchange.org).

She is personally committed to making the sustainability and clean energy workforce welcoming to women and people of color. Request informational interviews at <http://informational.bomee.com>.