

Elisabeth Haub School of Law

ENVIRONMENTAL LAW PROGRAM

Haub Distinguished Professor of Environmental Law Position Description

Pace University's Elisabeth Haub School of Law seeks to hire a full-time tenured faculty member for an endowed chair in Environmental Law including, broadly, energy law, land use law, natural resources law, and international environmental law.

The Environmental Law Program at The Elisabeth Haub School of Law is internationally recognized and ranked in the top three environmental law programs in the nation. The program provides a dynamic, personalized and multifaceted learning experience for its environmental law students from around the world, as well as a collegial and stimulating work environment for its faculty and staff. Our dedicated faculty have been pioneers in developing and implementing environmental law, and serve as national and global leaders in the field.

The Elisabeth Haub School of Law is located in suburban White Plains, New York, in Westchester County, approximately 20 miles north of New York City. Our reputation and strong financial aid and scholarship program attract diverse and talented students from several states and a number of foreign countries.

Candidates for the Distinguished Professor of Environmental Law position should have outstanding writing skills, demonstrated records of scholarly achievement and a strong commitment to enriching both our curriculum and our academic community.

Applications are especially encouraged from people of color, individuals of varied sexual and affectational orientations, individuals who are differently-abled, veterans of the armed forces or national service, and anyone whose background and experience will contribute to the diversity of our faculty. Pace University is committed to achieving completely equal opportunity in all aspects of University life.

Please direct inquiries and letters of interest to Jennifer Chin, assistant to the Appointments Committee, at jchin2@law.pace.edu.